OF THE WORK

Speakers at Camp of Instruction Tell How Aid Can Be Rendered.

THEIR DUTY TO PROVIDE FOR SICK AND WOUNDED

Activity of the American National Red Cross, in All Its Phases.

LECTURES TOMORROW; THE PUBLIC INVITED

Lectures at 3:30 in assembly tent. This is the one event at the camp to which the public is invited.

"Military History and Policy"—Frederick Hildekoper, Boy Scout exhibit.

Material aid can be rendered by the women of the country in time of war by caring for the sick and wounded and looking after the non-professional work in the depot and base hospitals and convalescent homes, representatives of the American National Red Cross Society told the students of the National Service School in addresses at the regular session for instruction yesterday afternoon. The work of the American National Red Cross in all its branches was explained by Miss Delano, head of the nursing service; Miss Marion Oliver, head of the lay nursing force; Col. Jefferson R. Kean, Medical Corps, U. S. A., military director of the Red Cross. A paper by Miss Mabel Boardman was read.

The big tent, where the public lectures are given every afternoon, was "packed to the flaps" with the students and visitors.

Historic Details Given.

Details of the early history of the American Red Cross were given by Miss Delano, who spoke of the importance of having a well trained and well organized nursing force ready for the field in time of need. Next to the medical force, she said, the nursing service was the most important branch of the military organization. Explaining the growth of the service in the last few months, she said that just before she came to the camp she asked some of the clerks in the office how many nurses there were. "About 6,300," another said, "while another said, 'You had better say 6,500, for it will be that many by the time you get out there.' That is literally true."

Miss Delano also explained to the students the rigid requirements for designation as a Red Cross nurse, including graduation from a general hospital, registration in states requiring it, endorsement of the national nurses' association and other requirements to insure that only the right persons were picked for this service. But, in addition to the purely professional work, she said, it was hoped to build up an organization of groups of nurses' aids, people who could assist the nursing force in looking after the non-professional work in the hospitals and base stations. "That," she said, "would relieve the nurses for the more professional duties. The service, Miss Delano continued, would give opportunity to patriotic women to render a great service in time of war. There are a great many things which can be done by patriotic women to assist the professional nurses in time of war."

Nurses' Aid Force, Theme.

Detailing this branch of the nurses' aid force, Miss Marion Oliver said that although it was not so attractive or important as that of the nurses, it is a most necessary work, and upon it will rest the responsibility of keeping the hospital machinery running smoothly. "The lay personnel of the hospital unit," she said, "will be allowed to undertake the care of the linen rooms, surgical supply rooms, reading to the wounded, writing letters for them and the washing and making comfortable of the patients with the bandages and one thing which will relieve the nurses and physicians so that they may be free to follow the purely professional work, leaving the rest to us."

"Of course, many of us who take the course of instruction cannot serve our country in this way—would not be chosen to do so even if we could, for only those who are specially fitted for the work and who can meet the requirements of health, age, etc., will be appointed, and so a great proportion of us will be left out of the hospital unit formations. What is left for us, and how can we serve? There are several ways in which we may be of very real use. When a country is at war both troop trains and trains of wounded must perform, pass through the cities on their way either to the front or to the base hospitals. We have learned from the war abroad of how useful it is to have rest stations at each depot, with food and refreshments for the weary men or for the wounded."

"Some of us could form ourselves into a group of thirty or more in each city and undertake this work. One room in a railroad station could be turned into a temporary hospital ward, where those soldiers who are too ill to go farther may be taken and given emergency treatment until they are able to be transferred to the base hospitals. The food and coffee for troop trains would be served by the members of these Red Cross groups, in the trains or on the station platforms."

Marshaling the Supplies.

Methods of marshaling the supplies of the Red Cross in time of war were explained in the paper written by Miss Boardman. A number of warehouse or collecting depots will be established throughout the country, the paper said, and each depot will be fed by a certain number of states. Supply columns will be in charge of these collecting depots. To the officers of these columns instructions will be sent from Washington as to the goods to be collected. It will be the duty of each column in case of war to notify through the press and other agencies the states that contribute to their respective collecting depots. As boxes are received containing articles, they are unpacked and the articles sorted out according to their nature. Not until the outbreak of war would it be possible to locate the great distributing warehouses, which, perhaps, would be two or three in number. These warehouses are supplied from the collecting depots. Any medical establishment that was in need of supplies would have simply to telegraph to them from the bureau in Washington stating what was needed.

The bureau would immediately forward to the warehouse within whose distributing district this hospital was situated orders for the shipment of supplies. The warehouse, then finding that the supplies of this nature were greatly reduced by filling such orders, would at once send out to the various collecting depots, its feeders, a request for more of the depleted stock of such articles. The depots would respond to this request and would then notify, in their turn, through the press and other agencies, the various committees, organizations and individuals that were sending in supplies to them from the states under their respective jurisdiction what articles were most needed.

ticles would be kept flowing to the warehouses from all parts of the country."

Personnel of Medical Force.

Col. Kean spoke principally of the organization of the personnel of the medical force. He described the scheme of the medical service of the army as a bridge of three spans. The first span, he said, was the service at the front, which was performed by the medical officers of the army and the National Guard. Its main purpose, he continued, was to get the wounded back to the base. The second span he described as the line of communications and base, which they did not have officers enough, and if it was not provided by the Red Cross it would remain undone. Therefore the Red Cross is beginning to organize base hospitals, enrolling doctors and nurses from the civil hospitals in the country, and the Red Cross chapters are being asked to furnish the equipment.

The third span, he said, embraces the civil and military hospitals in the home country which would be prepared by the Red Cross to receive the overflow of the convalescents from the base hospitals.

TROOPS FROM ANTIPODES ARE FIGHTING IN FRANCE

Australians and New Zealanders Commanded by Gen. William Riddell Birdwood.

LONDON, May 9.—The Australian and New Zealand troops who have taken over a portion of the fighting line on the British front in France are under the command of Gen. William Riddell Birdwood, who was the leader of the colonials in the Gallipoli campaign. The last detachment of the Australians left Alexandria March 21 and were transported across the Mediterranean to prepared bases at Marseilles and Havre without a single mishap. Several times the transports were warned of submarines laying in wait for them, but they managed to avoid their undersea enemies.

The New Zealanders followed the Australians to France and the colonials took their places on the firing line without delay.

The first day they occupied the trenches the Germans hoisted a banner on which was written "Welcome, Australians."

REPUBLICANS PAY HIGH FOR CONVENTION SEATS

Prices on Reservations at Chicago Now $50 and May Reach $100 Each.

CHICAGO, May 9.—Managers of the republican national convention, to be held here the week of June 7, have a serious situation confronting them in regard to the sale of tickets. The seats have been placed on sale at $50 each, and the demand has far exceeded the available supply, and it has been suggested that it will be necessary to raise the price to $100 or possibly higher in order to stop the rush for reservations. The situation will be considered today by Frederick W. Upham, chairman of the Chicago committee for the convention. The committee has been allotted 2,300 tickets, which, at $50 a ticket, would be more than enough to meet the one-hundred-thousand-dollar guarantee made to secure the convention for Chicago. Seats for the progressive party convention, which have been placed on sale at prices ranging from $10 to $25.

UNDERPAID POSTAGE IS HEAVY

Foreign Business Men and Others Protest Against American Practice.

Some idea of the extent to which Americans, through negligence or ignorance, place insufficient postage on letters and parcel post mail destined to foreign countries is disclosed in reports to the State Department from American consultants abroad, who frequently voice the protests of foreign business men and others at having to "buy their American mail."

A recent report from Consul Loop at Hamilton, Bermuda, shows that more than 27 per cent of Bermuda's 1914 postal surplus came from penalties collected because of underpaid postage on letters and parcel mail. These penalties aggregated $2,860. The letters instead of being prepaid at the usual foreign letter rate of 5 cents an ounce bore 2-cent stamps and their recipients in Bermuda paid double the amount of the deficiency, or 6 cents, as penalty.

The same condition prevails in many other foreign countries and postal authorities here have sought in every way to bring it to the attention of Americans carrying on foreign correspondence.

TO HOLD ANNUAL MEETING.

Representative Fess to Address Terminal Y. M. C. A. Tomorrow.

The terminal railroad department of the Young Men's Christian Association is to hold its eighth annual meeting tomorrow at the rooms of the association at the Union station. The meeting is to be presided over by the chairman of the committee of management, B. R. Tolson, and brief reports will be given by O. J. Rider, treasurer; Edward Foulke, chairman of the auditing committee; and G. H. Winslow, secretary. The principal address will be by Representative S. D. Fess of Ohio. A musical program has been arranged.

BLUE LAWS MAY GET YOU IF YOU MOW YOUR LAWN ON SUNDAY IN MARYLAND

Invoking Maryland's blue laws, Mrs. Leonard C. Hill of Friendship Heights, Md., yesterday caused the issuance of warrants in police court at Rockville against two of her neighbors, Henry Lattner and Samuel D. Shepherd. In the allegations Mrs. Hill says Messrs. Lattner and Shepherd mowed their lawns, trimmed their hedges and did other work not consistent with a strict observance of the Sabbath.

Mr. Lattner today told a reporter for The Star that he and his neighbor, Mr. Shepherd, had done the work. Mrs. Hill says they did, and that they did it on Sunday. The lawns needed mowing, the hedges required trimming and flower beds clamored for attention. Mr. Lattner said, so, not thinking that anybody would object to the performance of such necessary work at the point of invoking Maryland's almost obsolete statutes, he and his neighbor did the work. Mrs. Hill straightaway traveled to Rockville and swore out warrants against them. Hearing of the cases to set for Saturday before Judge J. Alby Henderson.

NEWS FLASHES FROM THE FRONT WHERE FAIR "MILITARISTS" CAMP

MISS FRANCES LIPPITT, daughter of Senator Lippitt of Rhode Island, and Miss Constance Wickersham, daughter of the former Attorney General, held forth over the telephone booth yesterday. They were the "telephone guards."

Lieut. Jane Bigelow, daughter of Col. Bigelow, was officer of the day yesterday, and she issued orders and kept the camp discipline at top notch, as if she had been in Uncle Sam's regular service for years.

Guard mount is held at 8 o'clock in the morning. Then the old guard goes off and the officer of the day is changed.

There was some disappointment among the recruits yesterday that Miss Boardman did not get out. But she was called away from the city. However, the camp officers have the promise of Miss Boardman that she will come out before the camp is over and talk to the students.

The policemen at the camp are and are not. Yesterday there was a report that they were to be deputized as deputy marshals of Maryland, and then some one threw a wrench into the machinery by saying that they could not be deputized because they were not residents of Maryland. However, the Maryland authorities are playing "letty" first and have assigned a deputy to stay at the camp day and night. This duty has been assigned to Deputy Sheriff Horton Thompson. Deputy Sheriff W. E. Peake of the Bethesda district makes frequent trips to the camp day and night.

There was a big scare in camp yesterday. The girls were driven out into the open for their class work because the tents were too warm. They sat on the ground, and some of them leaned against a big tree, which had vines on it. Several of the girls touched it and thought they had been poisoned with poison ivy. A great big marine guard, with a big hatchet, came along and cut the vine down, but it was found not to be poison ivy.

Members of Uncle Sam's naval contingent who are teaching the women of the camp the various forms of signaling, declare that the pupils are very apt and are earnestly trying to master the systems.

Chief Quartermaster W. J. Fanger, from the Norfolk navy yard, and Chief Quartermaster E. P. Shipp, from the battleship North Dakota, teach the wig-wag, two-arm semaphore and heliograph signals, while Chief Radio Electrician F. W. Hendon, from the radio station at Arlington, and Radio Electrician J. R. Pitt, from the President's yacht Mayflower, give instructions in wireless.

There was a stir at the signal classes yesterday when it was learned that all of the students will have to take examinations in signaling Friday and Saturday. They are to be spread across the field at intervals of five or six feet and the naval men will send the signals to them. The students will write down the message and their papers will be marked and rated.

The Senate has passed a joint resolution authorizing the loan of army equipment to the women's camp.

Whenever Miss Clara Barton's name was mentioned in the course of the addresses at the Red Cross day yesterday, there was hearty applause from the students of the camp and the visitors.

Miss Winifred Fairfax, warder of Cairo, Ill., was outside sentinel yesterday. In her tan riding boots she gave an impressive appearance. In between giving orders she was reciting the detaching-dash code in preparation for the examination soon to be given.

Misses Jane and Frances Cook of Baltimore were visitors at the camp yesterday.

Although the girls representing Baltimore at the camp are thoroughly enjoying the camp life, they admit that they will be glad to get back home.

Miss Ann Keyser has been called to her home in Baltimore on account of the death of her grandfather.

Dr. J. M. Binnie of Kansas City and Dr. Robert B. Greenough of Boston were visitors at the camp yesterday.

ALL HIS, THEY TELL PRESIDENT

Dudley Field Malone and Chairman Harris Say N. Y. Delegates Are Solid.

Dudley Field Malone, customs collector at New York, and Chairman Harris of the state democratic committee discussed the New York political situation in detail yesterday with President Wilson. They told him all of the state delegates to the St. Louis convention were for his nomination, although all had not been so instructed. Both men declared they did not take up the appointment of a New York postmaster.

Baltimore Loses Trolley Suit.

The Supreme Court of the United States has declined to grant the petition of the mayor and council of Baltimore to review the decision of the Maryland court of appeals which held unconstitutional the Maryland statute requiring street car lines in Baltimore to bear the cost of changing the paving material between street car tracks from Belgian block to asphalt.
